Should students have a long summer holiday or should terms be longer?

That's a controversial question. Both variants have their advantages or disadvantages.

On one hand, longer holidays mean less study hours, which is not really good idea, but children would absolutely love it. On the other hand, longer terms will be tiring and more stressful for students. And you can keep on studying during summer holidays. You can visit different summer camps, go to museums, theatres, ~~per~~ galleries, etc.

As for me, I usually do different activities during my holidays. I can go for a walk with my friends or read a book for a whole day. Some people spend ~~they~~ their holidays lying on the sofa for hours and some just can't stay home. I feel like I'm between these two categories.

Three months, in my opinion, are more than enough for summer holidays. I'd split them and place one half during winter, so there'd be longer winter and shorter summer holidays, 1.5 months each. I think there'll be a lot of things to do during winter and now we'll have more time to skate, ski and celebrate the new year.
